TUFSDAY EVE'G., AUGUST 19, 1879.

A Eusnman's Device -Captain Aylward tells a droll story of a renconter between a bushman and a lion. The narrator was acquainted with the man, and has no doubt of the truth of the story. The bushman, while a long way from home, was met by a lion. The animal, assured that he had his victim completely in his power, began to sport and dally with him with a feline jocosity which the poor little bushman failed to appreciate. The lion would appear at a point in the road and leap again into the jungle, to reappear a little further on. But the bushman did not lose his presence of mind, and presently hit upon a device by which he might possibly outwit his foe. This plan was suggested by the lion's own conduct. Aware that the brute was ahead of him, he dodged to the right, and, feeling pretty sure of the lion's whereabouts, resorted to the course of quietly watching his movements When the tion discovered that the man had suddenly disappeared from the path, he was a good deal perplexed. He roared with mortification when he espied the bushman peeping at him over the grass. The bushman at once changed his position, while his enemy stood irresolute in the path, following with his eye the shifting black man. In another moment the little man rustled the reeds, vanished, and showed again at another point. The great brute was first confused and then alarmed. It evidently began to dawn on him that he had mistaken the position of matters, and that he was the hunted party. The bushman, who clearly recognized what was passing in the animal's mind, did not let him pause to recover his startled wits. He began to steal gradually toward the foe, who, now in a complete state of doubt and fear, fairly turned tail and decamped, leaving the plucky and ingenious little bushman master of the situation.
